

Dr. Trotti is an associate professor of neurology at Emory University, where she serves as the associate program director for the sleep medicine fellowship. Clinically, her practice is focused on treatment-refractory hypersomnolence disorders and the multidisciplinary care of people with Parkinson's disease. Her research work focuses on the pathophysiology and treatment of the central disorders of hypersomnolence. She is a member of the Hypersomnia Foundation Medical Advisory Board and the American Academy of Sleep Medicine Board of Directors.