

Michelle Zeidler is a Professor of Medicine at the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA with training in Pulmonary, Critical Care and Sleep Medicine. She is an ABIM board certified sleep physician and directs the Sleep Disorders Center at the VA Greater Los Angeles Health Care System, one of the largest VA sleep centers in the country. She is also the Sleep Fellowship Program Director at UCLA. She holds a masters in clinical research from UCLA with two decades of clinical research experience. Her current interest is in population management of patients with obstructive sleep apnea with funding from the ASSM to develop a clinical decision support tool with which to triage patient to the appropriate sleep study.